The UK has so many amazing spots to explore and events to attend that a single guide could never do it full justice.

The flat grey slabs of the Granite City have long been awash in the oil industry that led to its economic boom of recent decades. But while the Earth is burning and the oil reserves of the North Sea decrease, Aberdeen has been turning its efforts towards other sources of energy while exercising a rebrand for its image as something other than the home of Big Oil shrugging in nonchalance. Part of this rebrand has seen money being allocated towards the arts, which has led to the inauguration of several cultural organisations and art festivals in the city.

Yet long before this turn towards culture was made, Peacock Visual Arts have been hosting Asting Trail > incredible art events since 1974.
